The International Council of Scientists

GWC program

“Global World Communicator (GWC). Education and Science” - the first international program in the format of a „World Wide Discussion” introduced to develop general concept of evaluation of higher education institutions and scientific centers with the aim to assign a professional quality rating to them. This work is carried out in stages and encompasses carrying out appraisals and holding conferences with participation of highest quality specialists from different countries, within the frame of the International Council of Scientists (ICS).

We invite universities from different countries to join the program and receive international accreditation in program “Global World Communicator GWC. Education and Science”.

We also invite professors from these universities to become a member of the International Council of Scientists.

Accreditation allows the university to join the assessment system, directly participate in the process of assigning an international professional rating and influence it.

The university participation in the program and professors in the International Council of Scientists opens wide opportunities for international cooperation, for consolidation of humanitarian values in the modern open world, for objective assessment of scientific-educational potential of universities, ways for further development, for creation of a joint professional system of assessment of educational and scientific institutions.

The activities of the International Council of Scientists are carried out remotely. The university participating in the GWC Program activities receives all information materials and software resources developed within the framework of the program.
